DANIEL O'HARA MAKES HEROIC RESCUE

Daniel O'Hara, a well known local street car conductor proved quite a hero yesterday afternoon when at the risk of his own life he rescued from a watery grave Paul Cunningham, aged 6 years, whose home is in Kenwood. The rescue took place in the Merrimack river at a point near the home of James J. McManis, the artist, and was witnessed by several people.

It seems that the little Cunningham boy, who was walking along the river bank, slipped and rolled down the embankment into the river. Mr. O'Hara, who at that time was passing the spot in a car, heard cries of distress and rushing to the river edge he saw the boy being carried toward midly stream. Mr. O'Hara quickly divested himself of his overcoat and plunged into the water. By this time the boy had disappeared under water, but the heroic rescuer plunged down and succeeded in bringing the exhausted boy to shore. First aid treatment was administered and later the little fellow was removed to St. John's hospital.

where after treatment he was pronounced out of danger. The boy's father is with the American Forces in France.

SOLDIERS ENTERTAINED AT K. OF C. ROOMS

Seventy-one soldiers were entertained and given lodging at the Knights of Columbus rooms Saturday evening. The visitors' homes were in such distant places as Utah, Missouri, Kansas, Illinois and many other places east of Chicago. Yesterday they were entertained with an informal musicale at which songs were given by Thomas, John, John A. Burke, John T. Baxter and others singing by the assembly. Walter O'Neill presided at the piano most acceptably.

Sunday, Philip J. Green and his family, assisted by J. J. Ryan, were on the job looking after the comforts of the boys. John F. Golden, P. J. Gullivan, Andrew Melton, Dr. James F. Gaffney and Chris. McSorley constituted a committee yesterday and succeeded admirably in making every visiting soldier happy and contented. Another contingent of uniformed men is expected Wednesday night and Thursday, and the knights will entertain them in their usual capital style.

FIREMEN TO DEAL WITH WAR LABOR BOARD

The wage grievances existing between the stationary firemen and the officials of the local cotton mills, have been referred to the war labor board at Washington. This action was taken at a meeting of the Stationary Firemen's union, which was held yesterday afternoon at 22 Middle street with President Thomas F. Quinn in the chair, after a report from U. S. Conciliator Rodhe was received. It was stated at the meeting that the mill officials will not come to terms because in their opinion the 75 or more men employed as firemen and coal passers in the mills could be easily replaced.

SOCIAL AND FRATERNAL

A feature of yesterday afternoon's meeting of the members of the Lowell Aerie of Eagles was the initiation of a class of 54 candidates. The meeting was presided over by Worthy President John A. Cahill, while the initiation ceremony was presided over by Past Worthy Commander T. F. Barry. Fifty-eight applications for membership were received and interesting remarks were made by State Worthy President Hensgen, F. W. P. Cornelius O'Keefe, Hon. George B. Marchand, Dennis A. Murphy, James F. Niskoll and State Secretary Edward Grant of Cambridge.

A.O.H. Meeting

A meeting of the committee appointed last St. Patrick's day by the several local Irish organizations, held a meeting in A.O.H. hall yesterday for the purpose of making arrangements for a mass meeting to be held at Association

ASK WILSON TO ADJUST AUSTRIA

Difficulties of Returning to Peace Footing After War
Is Illustrated

"Wilson Licked Us, But He Will Now Help Us," Austrian Tells Italians

VIENNA, Wednesday, Nov. 20.—(By the Associated Press)—Difficulties attending the process of returning to a peace footing after a great war are illustrated here. Munition factories have been shut down, throwing out of work hundreds of thousands of men and women who have little prospect of obtaining employment because of the lack of coal. Cold weather also already begun and snow has fallen in Vienna.

While the streets of the city are bright and the theatres and opera are open, well dressed people are walking or using street cars, as cashmen demand from two to three dollars a ride. This is all on the surface. There is untold misery in the poorer quarters with a constant cry for bread, of which there is provided half a loaf a week for each person. Prices here are probably the highest to be found in Europe and seem fantastic. The price of a shirt-waist is $100; stockings cost $5 and a suit of clothes $150. The profiteers are also hit, the industry of weaving paper into material for the manufacture of men's and women's clothing having virtually collapsed. This material, which once sold for $6 a yard, is now being dumped on the market at any price.

Vienna is making desperate efforts to get food and coal, which the Czechs and Slovaks are said to have offered, provided they are granted the western strip of old Bohemia adjoining old Bavaria. It is also stated that propositions have been made by American packing companies, but cable communication is very slow and uncertain. There is need for the business people to open up their former vocations, but this at present is impossible.

It is proposed to ask President Wilson for help in carrying out the work of adjusting the country to its new life. The correspondent overheard a dispute between an Austrian railroad conductor and some Italians. The latter asked: "Who was it who licked Austria?" The conductor replied: "Wilson did it and he will now help us."

The biggest fact apparent in Austria's breaking up of housekeeping is that there is no poignant regret among the common people. The sentiment generally found was expressed by a soldier the correspondent met among the rivers of men retreating from the Italian front. He said: "Now the war is over and we are all brothers, whether French, British or Americans. Any kind of a brother is a good one."

Along the line coming up from Trieste to Vienna the correspondent talked with dozens of officers, who were disappointed merely because their defeat had been at the hands of the Italians, whose military qualities they always scorned.

"If anybody else had done it, we would not mind," said an Austrian general, who said the defeat might be attributed to three reasons—Hungary's withdrawal of support and troops, the weariness of the Austrians, and President Wilson's notes culminating in his refusal to treat with Emperor Charles. Those reasons, he said, brought about the final smash, with the soldiers refusing to fight when attacked by the Italians.

BOY HIT BY AUTO HAS FRACTURED LEG

Bernard Morin, aged about 11 years, is at the Lowell Corporation hospital suffering from a fracture of the leg and bruises about the body as a result of an automobile accident, which occurred yesterday afternoon in Merrimack street.

The accident was reported to the police by the owner and driver of the car, Herbert W. Parham, of 115 Union street, Lawrence, who stated that yesterday afternoon at about 2 o'clock, while he was operating his machine in Merrimack street, the Morin boy at a point near the Jewel the-

While the Lowell Gas Light Co. is announcing a drop in the price of gas, the Lowell Electric Light Corp. is announcing an increase in the cost of electricity. The drop in the price of gas, 10 cents per thousand cubic feet, will go into effect Jan. 1, 1919, while the increase in the cost of electric current, a half-cent per kilowatt hour for power and one cent per kilowatt hour for light, will go into effect next Thursday, Nov. 28.

The Lowell Gas Light Co. in reducing its rates gives for its reason the expectation of changed conditions in the cost of coal, etc., while the Lowell Electric Light Corp. bases its increase on the high cost of coal, labor, etc.

AT THE IMMACULATE CONCEPTION CHURCH

A particularly inspiring service was held at the Immaculate Conception church at the late mass yesterday morning. Rev. Lawrence F. Tighe, O.M.I., pastor of the church, paid a glowing tribute to the six young men of the parish who have given up their lives in the national service. The Immaculate Conception parish service flag will have six golden stars in its center as a result of the supreme sacrifice made by the gallant members of the parish and Fr. Tighe urged his listeners to offer up frequent prayer for the men who have gone as a practical manifestation of appreciation for what they have given.

Three of the golden stars were born last week when first news of the deaths of Capt. Paul E. Kittredge, Private Thomas McDonough and Private Raymond E. Chappell was received. The other Immaculate Conception soldiers who have given up their lives in the great struggle are Sgt. Michael Penton, Private Edward Ollis and Private Thomas McDonough.

13 TONS OF FOOD CARRIED BY AIR FORCED SAVED BELGIAN TROOPS FROM STARVING

DUNKIRK, France — (Correspondence of the Associated Press) — Thirteen tons of food was carried by the British Royal Air Force and the Belgian Air Force to several divisions of the Belgian army which had advanced beyond the Houthulst Forest in Belgium, early in the allied offensive in the Belgian sector, and sustained those troops during the period in which they were cut off from supplies owing to impassable roads. This is believed to be the largest scale on which supplies were ever delivered to troops by airplane.

Continuous rain, shell fire and artillery had ground the roads out of existence. They were transformed into channels of deep mud. By evening the Belgian command of the Belgian Air Force reported that supplies of food had been exhausted. Would it be possible, he enquired, to send food up by airplane?

The answer was that it would and the task was assigned to the Belgian Air Force and to the Fifth Group of the British Royal Air Force. Their job was to deposit army rations at a point to which nothing but a bird or an airplane could penetrate.

It has been done before, of course; the garrison of Kut received supplies by air, and ammunition and the like have been dropped at various places. But it had never been attempted on such a scale.

The cases of rations were broken up into appropriate parcels and these were packed in sacks of earth to cushion them for the fall; while upon the front the hungry divisions prepared the dumping grounds and marked them with large white crosses. Some eighty machines shared the work between them, including a squadron of the Fifth Group's two-seaters. They lifted their loads easily, and one by one they dipped to the front—it was the front, too, and close to the line—and dropped them overboard to the cheering reception committees below and returned. Only one machine, attacked by a German machine-gun from the ground—it was as close to the front as that—had to land; and by 11 a. m. the general reported that all his units had been supplied.

The pastor urged that as many as possible attend the union Thanksgiving service, to be held on Thursday at the Kirk Street church. He spoke in the evening from the first of a series of sermons on "The Man and the Tree," which was "The Man Behind the Tree."

First Baptist

The regular services at the First Baptist church were conducted yesterday with preaching by the assistant pastor, Rev. A. G. Warner, at the morning session. "The Captain of Our Salvation," was the topic of the sermon, which dealt with the life of Jesus Christ, who amazed the world with his program of the freedom of the souls of men. His mission challenged the admiration of men, although it reflected upon the men who had preceded Him, and who had tried to enlist the full support of the people. Men had risen thousands upon thousands to follow these standards, only to realize that it was not the freedom the soul was longing for. The great truth finally dawned upon men that it was not by their works, mighty as they might be. It was the whole hearted, true faith, which was the program of Jesus Christ, and which created a life of honor, of virtue and of righteousness. "Should the Kaiser Be Shot?" was the subject discussed by the pastor, Rev.

A. C. Archibald at the evening service. Rev. Mr. Archibald said in part:

"For 40 years the Kaiser has taught his people they might defy God if they acquired material strength. For four years he has defied every other nation and law. This man must meet in time every one of his victims. The God of justice will meet him wherever he may go. The man responsible for the death of ten million men—is he to escape? He is under God's law and there is no refuge. The hell of remorse, and of conscience, and for the time, is eternally present. The fires of hell rage tonight in the Kaiser's bosom. He will not escape."

Now, how much of this divine sentence is to be administered by men? Is he to be permitted to retire to his magnificent palace at Corfu to live out the balance of his days? The ravaged women of Belgium, the crucified soldiers, the children cruelly bayoneted protest against letting this murderer go free. Shall law be changed to suit him? Never for one moment will that be permitted. But we have become very soft. Never was the German propagandist doing so much work in this country as now. Some are urging that we can afford in our triumph to be very generous to the Germans. Every mention of Germany to Americans should bring to our vision the Lusitania and Edith Cavell and Louvain and the thousand savageries of the unspeak-able Turks that never drew a protest from the Kaiser. A million Armenians were slaughtered, tortured, outraged with never a word from him. We must not forget justice in this hour.

Shall we allow this arch-murderer to go free? Not while the blood of his victims cries out from the ground.

It is the law of God that what a man sows that must he also reap. Germany reaped a part of her harvest when last Thursday she gave up that great fleet. What a magnificent sight it must have been, that great surrender. She has lost her colonies and her out-rages in Africa have led the world to say, Germany never again shall rule the black man.

Immanuel Baptist morning at the Immanuel church on the subject, "A Thanksgiving Message." A delegation from the Warren Avenue church of Boston was present at the evening service, at which time there was an address by Arthur W. Baker, with stereopticon slides.

TO AVOID AND RELIEVE INFLUENZA

BY DR. FRANKLIN DUNN
Many people have been frightened by what they have read or heard of influenza. The more you fear the disease, the surer you are to get it. Go right about your business and forget it. As the disease is spread principally by contact through sneezing, coughing or spitting, many health authorities have advised that everyone wear a gauze which is daily washed and saturated with a one to five hundred solution of the sulphate in water, and then dried before wearing over the nose and mouth. You should avoid crowds, common drinking cups and public towels. Keep your strength up by taking lots of exercise in the open air and plenty of nourishing food.

If you have any of such symptoms as chilliness, nasal obstruction, flushed face, headache, feverishness, restlessness, weakness, or irritating cough, give up work at once and go to bed. This will save your strength. A cold overcome the disease. Put your feet in hot water for fifteen minutes. Thoroughly loosen the bowels with some such mild and purgative as Epsom's Salts. Drink principally of hot lemonade and then cover up with plenty of clothes in bed so as to get a good sweat. When sweating is free and the fever reduced take a dose of two Auric Tablets every four hours, followed by drinking at least a glass or two of hot water. Auric Tablets help quickly to relieve the soreness of the muscles and bones from which most patients complain and help the kidneys flush out the poisons.

To relieve nasal obstructions and excessive discharge from the nose, probably nothing is better than such a mild, soothing, antiseptic wash as Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It will give great relief. Employed as a gargle, in the same strength as made up for use in the nose, and as hot as can be borne, it quickly arrests soreness and dryness in the throat.

Influenza weakens the patient's resistance to disease, so that there is danger of bronchitis and pneumonia developing. To combat this tendency and fortify the patient's strength insist that he keep in bed at least two days. Probably nothing will at this stage hasten the recovery and strengthen the patient more than an iron-ore tonic called "Frona" or that well known herbal tonic, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which has been used by thousands in the past two generations.

the pastor, Rev. W. C. Townsend, dealing with the national and religious reasons. The topic for the sermon at the evening service was, "Three Men in the Fire." Now that the evangelistic services are ended, the class meeting on Tuesday evening at the Central church, and the regular prayer meeting Friday night at Worthington Street church will be resumed this week. The congregation was urged to attend the union Thanksgiving service.

Primitive Methodist

Owing to the pastor's absence, the pulpit was supplied yesterday morning at the First Primitive church by one of the local preachers, Mr. John Foster.

Lawrence Street Church

"Things to Be Thankful For" was the topic of the sermon yesterday morning at the Lawrence Street Primitive Methodist church, with preaching by the pastor, Rev. John Singleton. THE GERMAN SURRENDER

No other spectacle in all history can compare in grandeur, scope and magnificence of triumph to the surrender of the German navy to the allied fleets off the coast of Scotland, on Nov. 21.

The battle of Trafalgar, the destruction of the Spanish Armada, Dewey's victory at Manila bay, and the battle of Santiago harbor, all dwindle into insignificance in comparison with the bloodless victory recorded in the abject surrender of the whole German navy—battleships, cruisers, destroyers and submarines,—all turned over to the victorious allies.

It was the glorious climax of a great campaign conducted by England, France and Italy during four long years of frightfulness and assisted very materially during the last year and a half by the navy of the United States. It was an event that marked the day of righteous retribution for Germany, a just punishment for her headish policy of frightfulness and the total extinction of German naval power.

It was a glorious day especially for England, and right well did her people, her king and Admiral Beatty enjoy it. The officials and crews of the allied fleets had only feelings of the utmost contempt for the Germans who now appeared before that grand pageant of the allied navies to offer the meek surrender of the German navy, not now in their haughty, relentless, arrogant mood, not practising frightfulness, but cringing for mercy, like the cowards that they proved themselves to be in the fact that they had not dared to risk a final battle with the British navy. It had been aptly remarked that even the old junks of the Spanish fleet at Santiago harbor, knowing that they had not one chance in a thousand to escape, nevertheless made a dash outward and gave battle until their ships were sunk or destroyed. But as for the Germans, after the battle of Jutland, they never once left their hiding place.

The German admiral had the presumption to submit to Admiral Beatty, representing the allies, a document for signature pledging that the crews of the German warships would not be mistreated. Admiral Beatty tore up the document with scorn, his only answer being—"Tell the crews that they are going to England."

It was fitting that no military honors whatever were offered to the surrendering Germans because of their cowardly attacks upon hospital ships, the crusade of frightfulness carried out by the submarines, and the cowardice shown by the main body of the German navy in refusing to accept the challenge to battle.

Every precaution had been made against treachery, but of this there was not the slightest danger as the Germans realized that any attempt of this kind would result in sending the perpetrators quickly to the bottom of the sea.

While the German navy was surrendering to the allies, the army on land was carrying out the terms of the armistice to the letter, so that the power of Germany both on land and sea is now completely overthrown and thus, after the most terrible war in all history, the worst menace that ever threatened civilization has been overcome and its power for evil in the future, completely removed and destroyed.

Nov. 11 and Nov. 21 may well remain as red letter days in the history of the world, and every American may well rejoice that our nation has had a part, an honorable and a decisive part in the attainment of this glorious victory, the greatest recorded in all human history. It may well be regarded as the great forerunner of a more Christian and humane civilization, and the dawning light of universal peace.

DEVELOPMENTS OF THE WAR

The war has brought about many scientific advances that had hitherto been considered impossible. One of these is the radio telephone, by which the human voice can be projected many miles into the air so as to communicate with airplanes at a very considerable distance. Before the war, John Hays Hammond announced that he could direct the movement of small boats at sea by electric force operated from the shore. Whether his invention or discovery proved practical, the fact remains that it did not figure in fighting the submarines as might have been expected. Among the other discoveries, as a result of the war, were the depth bombs, which proved one of the most effective methods of destroying submarines. The smoke screen was another device which, however, was not entirely original inasmuch as Homer, in his description of a duel between young Paris and Menelaus, tells of how Venus assisted Paris to escape by flight by throwing around him a heavy fog which concealed him from the view of his pursuers.

The development of the aeroplane and the hydroplane was also a result of the war. The aeroplane is now regarded as the eyes of the army, and the hydroplane is similarly the eye of the navy. It is well remembered that a couple of British warships were sunk early in the war off the Pacific coast, by a German raider. The warships since then have adopted the plan of bringing along hydroplanes, which can survey the seas for a great distance around and report the presence of yessels and the direction in which they are moving.

The aeroplane has proved a most useful fighting machine during the war, and there is no doubt whatever that it can be applied to purposes equally useful in the arts of peace.

Already the airplane is proving its value in the government mail service, and it is not too much to assume that the day is not far distant when the aeroplane will be so perfected that it can be used for carrying passengers with almost as much safety as might be enjoyed on a fast railroad train.

The British tank proved to be one of the most effective machines evolved by the necessities of the war. This served to meet and overcome the formidable mass formations of the Germans, and no machine ever constructed for a definite purpose accomplished that purpose better than did the tanks. They were a terror to the Germans as the submarines were to the allies, and probably the most formidable of all the mobile engines of war.

The tank too, can be successfully applied in various kinds of work in times of peace. It demonstrates the efficacy of the friction, whose application is yet very limited compared to what it will be in the future in building and other operations requiring great horse power combined with a facility for moving over rough ground.

BATTLE OF THE ARGONNE

Judging from the long list of casualties that has been given to the country, during the last three weeks, the American forces must have suffered terribly in the battle of the Argonne. When the history of that battle is written, we believe it will show that it was one of the most severe and mutually destructive in the entire war, comparing with the battle of the Mons, the first battle of the Marne, and some of the other severe onslaughts in which the British or French withstood the attack of the Germans in their great drives.

The charge of the Light Brigade in the Crimean war, as described by Tennyson, was not a circumstance to the assault of the American troops on the wooded hills of the Argonne, all thickly lined with German guns, bombers and forces of all kinds, well concealed and ready for attack. The Americans had to approach in the open, just as had the Light Brigade, and under the withering fire with which they were met. But they went on and on until they dislodged the enemy, cleared the woods of the Germans and thereby won a final victory that compelled Germany to shout "Kamerad" and call for an armistice.

The paces of casualties published daily for the past few weeks, tell a terrible story and one that proves beyond all question that the American boys never flinched or recoiled under fire, although in making such attacks they rushed into the jaws of death.

Germany made her last stand at the Argonne and, beaten there, all hope was gone and victory, glorious victory, rested upon the side of the allies; but in this battle alone, the Americans paid a heavy toll, not in one day, but in weeks of the fiercest fighting in the most difficult situation.

The American boys who died in the Argonne fight did not know what a victory they had achieved. Hardly were their bodies cold in their graves or gathered back from the thick forests when the Huns were begging for peace.

Admirable thought it was that the retired Hyde Park laundryman on his death should have left a will in which he provided that every family in his native town of Newburg, Me., should receive a daily paper as long as it wanted one, and at his expense. There may be some criticism in that community that the kind hearted testator limited his gift to choice of two Boston papers. It so happens, however, that both are generally regarded as reliable and entertaining papers. But, some families have nearly as much loyalty to their favorite paper as to their creed, but those who do not want either of the papers mentioned cannot become beneficiaries under the will.

More and more is being done to force each man to become his own transportation company, meaning, by purchasing a cheap auto and riding to and from his work. Boston's latest announced 8 cent fare effective Dec. 1st is another step in that direction. The Bay State's dime fare, if it can get it, would be another important step. The time may not be so far off when the $25 a week man will wheel out his cheap car at a given time in the morning. His front door will be a waiting station for three of his neighbors who will soberly and willingly each pass him a nickel or a dime to help pay for gasoline and tires, and the four workers will motor past the gangs busied in taking up street car rails.

Said Admiral Maurel to Admiral Beatty, when he turned over his fleet of 64 ships: "You understand we are driven to this. There is no child life in Germany. All are dying of hunger." What about the babies in English towns your aerial bombers killed and turned into cripples? What about the plainly marked Red Cross hospitals in northern France your warplanes hit? What about the Belgian babies your soldiers killed before the eyes of their mothers? Oh, to h— with your plea for "child life in Germany." Far better that German children should be born at a time when the world can have begun to forget the barbarism of your armies, if such a time can come.

All of us humble and much criticized newspapermen can feel somewhat elated over the announcement that Hen Ford is to turn editor and publisher, and issue a national weekly. If his weekly is as good as his auto, it will be a hummer. Detroit reports are to the effect that Ford is not a bad man to work for, and if he uses some of his auto factory ideas of wages in his new venture, the Fourth Estate will be glad to sweep out and thoroughly repair the tenement he is to occupy. He has some ideas on wages and the working day that the field he enters has needed to consider for a long time.

On January 1st, the United States will have lost on honest and capable public executive in the person of William Gibbs McAdoo. McAdoo, Crowder, Hoover and Garfield made a quartet hard to beat; they are credited with putting the "pat" in patriotism or, in other words, with bringing out the fighting qualities of the American people. Time will render judgment as to whether, by raising wages, McAdoo was justified, but there was no question as to his consistency in making us save our money by his jolly little Thrift stamps when our waste had been the despair of our bankers—and our creditors.

It savored of the ideals of old Sparta when we read of that Beverly father who personally escorted his errant son back to Portland and returned him to the custody of the sheriff from whose jail he, with eight others, escaped last Wednesday evening. Thus is indicated that the responsibility for the act which led to the Beverly boy finding himself in jail cannot be laid to the door of his father. He perhaps thought he knew more than his dad. But he didn't.

SEEN AND HEARD

The following poem is by our much esteemed friend, Judge Samuel P. Hadley. The judge tumbled it off on his typewriter at home and, hearing about it, insisted upon having it read in and out what his honor thinks of the Huns:

Absechied Zum Kaiser
Since the days of old King Fritz
(I forgot his name with a jumble of words)
The world has rarely borne the Huns
So much as now.
And his health, his humor, his clan,
Heid as vile as it began,
Crust, brutal, heartless, faithless, only worse.

But the French and British heroes,
With traitors and Yanks to back 'em,
Caught these heasting, beastly Huns
And most gloriously did whack 'em.
Yes, and crack 'em,
And to teach them to be civil,
Sent these blasted Huns of evil,
To their only home—friend and counselor, the devil.

His Costly Deer
Albert Shuman, who is on a gunning trip in Snohomish, Washington county, is having a most interesting trip. He started out with the idea he would astonish the town by his ability as a huntsman, and he has fulfilled his desire. One day this week, as he was returning at dusk, he saw what he thought to be an enormous deer and fired. But his deer proved to be a valuable cow from a neighboring farm. Just what Shuman intends to do with his prize deer we have yet to find out. Naturally his friends are eager to know.—Kennebec Journal.

Outkissed and Outguessed
"A police court isn't all grim and sordid," remarked a Los Angeles judge recently. "Sometimes something really funny happens. No so very long ago a chauffeur was brought in after having run down a man."

"Did you know that if you struck this pedestrian he would be seriously injured?" asked the judge.
"Yes, sir," replied the chauffeur.
"Then why didn't you zigzag your car and miss him?"
"He was zigzagging himself and outguessed me, Your Honor," was the answer.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Profit and Loss
Mother was very much occupied with the new baby, so father took it upon himself to keep Johnny from worrying her by being naughty. He noticed that his obstreperous young son had the quality of thriftiness and resolved to appeal to it.

"Sonny," said he, "I'm going to give you a cent every day you're a good boy, on condition that every day you are naughty you are to give me a cent. Is it a go?"
"I'd like to do it, dad," answered the small boy thoughtfully, "but I can't afford it. I've only got 25 cents in my bank to start on."

Unreliable as an Alarm Clock
The railway official invited the stern citizen to communicate his troubles.
"I want you to give orders," demanded the visitor, "that the engineer of the express which passes Elm Grove at about 11:55 be refrained from blowing his whistle there on Sunday mornings."

"Impossible," exploded the official. "What in all the world prompts you to make such a ridiculous request?"
"Well, you see," explained the citizen in an undertone, "our pastor preaches until he hears the whistle blow, and that confounded express was 20 minutes' late last Sunday."—Sirey Stories.

Rank Didn't Count Here

A woman, one of 30,000 British working for the Young Men's Christian association, was assigned to scrubbing the London Eagle last floor. She had done little manual labor in her life, but accepted the job without protest and went down on her knees with a pail of hot water, a cloth and a cake of soap.

Soon the water in the pail was black. A man in uniform passed. The woman looked up and asked if he would mind emptying the pail and refilling it with clean water. There was a theatrical pause, then this reply: "Thank you, madam, I'm an officer."

"This time there was no pause, but like a flash the scrubwoman retorted: "Dammit, officer, I'm a duchess!"—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

Phono Tuners Bar Women

Lovely woman may be a screaming success at "tickling the ivories." Her deft fingers and musical ear may call out of the interior of the most inanimate piano harmonious syncope and send the lover grand opera or jazz music into the seventh heaven of musical ecstasy. As a housewife she may be harmony herself, although this isn't always the case. She may be able to "pound" the most stubborn typewriter with a certain degree of harmony, and on the shining dance hall floor she may glide in full accord with the luring music of an old-time waltz.

But when it comes to putting accord into a discordant piano—well, that's an entirely different matter. The national convention of piano tuners seriously, though harmoniously, has agreed that lovely woman as a piano tuner is everything but a "howling success."

Only "male and white" piano tuners will be admitted to its membership, the convention announced as its inexorable verdict.
"Draft or no draft, we shan't alter our constitution," said President C. A. Deutschmann of Chicago. "Yes, there are a few women piano tuners," he added condescendingly, and then he shrugged his shoulders. "But they never take the time we men do. They haven't the patience."—Chicago News.

The War Mother

By Sergt. Joyce Kilmer's Mother.
The days are heavy, and the nights are long;
My boy, now grown to be a man, is gone;
I dream of him, a little lad once more—
And dreaming, wait for him beside the door.
I see him coming, clasp him in my arms;
Then wake—to feel the woe of War's alarms.

Before his lips could utter words to me.

The same look in his eyes was like a lance

THE MAN ABOUT TOWN

The genial chief of the guards at the United States Cartridge company's plants, Martin Conway, may have to, if gifts of diamonds continue to pour in on him, procure an armed guard to watch over his valuables. I understand he is a very popular man in this city. He lives in Billerica but so much of his business life has been spent in Lowell that Lowell claims him as one of her own. Recently a large number of his friends in Lawrence tendered him a love feast at Stanley's-on-the-Merrimack and after the great array of good things had been put where it would do the most good, Commissioner Maloney of Lawrence on behalf of the Lawrence boys presented Mr. Conway a diamond horseshoe stickpin valued at $500. Many Lawrence men during the height of the munitions boom here came to Lowell to secure work at the good wages offered and found Mr. Conway a good friend indeed toward helping them secure jobs. Some time earlier than the presentation of the diamond horseshoe pin from the Lawrence friends, Mr. Conway's Lowell friends got together and bought him a fine diamond ring which was presented to him with suitable accompanying exercises.

I wish we could have had as fine an exhibit of war relics and things brought from the battlefields in the war zones as was recently exhibited in the former Bacon department store building, first floor, in Boston. The exhibit took up the entire street floor and no admission was charged. If, after seeing the wonderful exhibit, you felt like putting some coins in a box near the door for the war charities you could do it.

I have heard a number of Lowell people express themselves as being the most strongly impressed and moved by one particular thing—something the more impressive because of its simplicity. It was a Red Cross knitted khaki colored sweater such as I presume thousands of Lowell women have knitted for boys in the army and navy. On one side of the front of this sweater were three medals for heroism and bravery three governments had given the American boy, including the Victoria Cross. On the other side of the sweater, in the spot next to the boy's heart, there was a gash and a tear in the sweater where a German bullet had crashed through to kill him. And this—the thing that "killed" most of the people who saw it—was decorated with the still observable dark spots which indicated the life blood of the boy who had freely given his life for democracy.

Judge Enright of the municipal court has received an interesting postcard from Squire George Allard, who is at an army training camp near Washington, D. C. Although necessarily cramped for space, Squire Allard tells Judge Enright that with the ending of the war he and three other Lowell attorneys, Privates Toye, O'Donoghue and Maloney, expect to soon be released from the army and returned to Lowell where, he adds, they hope in due time to again have the honor of pleading cases in the court presided over by Judge Enright.

Far from there being any abatement in the price you pay to see a movie show, there is good indication that the price will not be lowered because our government at Washington believes it must rake in all the revenue it can to pay its enormous bills and the tax on movie and other kinds of theatre tickets comes in very handy to the government. The tax may seem small, but I was astonished to hear the manager of one of the Lowell movie houses tell me that on a recent Friday night the tax money he banked next morning for the benefit of the government amounted to $40. He spoke of the sum as if it were not an unusual sum for his ticket sellers to collect for an evening.

I started to write something about the price of movie tickets and whether they would cost less, figuring that perhaps the war tax would be taken off. I have had a pleasant little confab with the old showman, Walter Nelson of the Merrimack square, who is president of the Lowell Managers association. He says he believes the war tax will be continued for at least two years longer and bases this belief on two things: the government's great need for revenue and the fact that the war tax experience of Spanish war time established a precedent wherein the tax on checks and other articles was continued for a year after the war was officially at an end.

Probably only a few persons outside the motion picture industry know it but the motion picture exhibitor has to pay the government a war tax which amounts to five cents per day per reel. Nearly every strictly motion picture house will have 12 reels in use each day and this calls for payment to the government of the sum of 60 cents. Now the government wants to raise the ante 50 per cent and have the exhibitor pay 10 cents per reel per day. The exhibitors protest against this and their protest has been most capably voiced and their case protested in a business like manner at Washington, so far as the Maine and Massachusetts exhibitors are concerned, by Alfred S. Black, president of the Maine branch of the National association, and owner of the Merrimack Square theatre in Lowell. He has maintained that if the government believes it must increase the footage tax on films the time is proper when the film manufacturers should bear some of the burden. All the exhibitors and many tax experts agree that this is a logical theory. The idea was approved and Mr. Black's efforts commended through the form of a vote of thanks extended him by Motion Pictures Exhibitors Corporation of the northwest at its recent convention in St. Paul. This association of exhibitors voted to back up Black and co-operate with the New England exhibitors in every way possible.

Many Lowell people who happened to be downtown Merrimack Square Saturday afternoon about 2 o'clock were curious to see a peculiar looking three-wheeled motorcycle being driven through the center of the city, manned by two soldiers in uniform. What interested the onlookers was the fact that the army motorcycle was fitted up as a basket like cage divided into sections, and filled with pigeons sitting on boxes. I learned afterward that these soldiers were signal corps men and they went to the top of Fort Hill and liberated their homer pigeons, which of course promptly returned with their quill-enclosed messages, to the signal corps cotes at Camp Devens.

COMMUNION

Editor of The Lowell Sun:
Dear Sir: It is indeed most commendable in you to take up the gauntlet thrown down by the editor of the Courier-Citizen, which attempts through its columns to formulate public opinion with regard to the conduct of the president of the United States, charging that he has dared to surround himself conspicuously with more men of Jewish persuasion than have existed in the American government since the "Pharaoic Oppression" is truly refreshing, to say the least, for an American citizen, even though of the Jewish faith, to gather from the editorial of the 21st inst. a conflict and clarified deduction of the abstruse reasoning of the learned editor of the opinion.

It is truly most regrettable at this period of progression in our American life, when we see the sons of France, whether Jews or Christians, when we see the men of Great Britain and the men of America, irrespective of race or creed, going forward toward the accomplishment of the greatest advance that the world has ever known, one is compelled to shrink back against and wonder what in the name of common sense, the editor of the Courier-Citizen is endeavoring to bring about when he presumably feels aggrieved that the president of the United States sees fit to select men of my persuasion for positions of trust. From the time America entered into the World War it cannot be gainsaid that the Jew in America has unhesitatingly participated in every war activity, whether in the purchase of Liberty bonds, in the drive of whether shedding his blood on the battlefields of France, he has ever held himself loyal to the instincts and teachings of the founders of our republic.

Most particularly at this time do I gratefully appreciate the stand you have taken in reply to the editor of the Courier-Citizen when America and her allies are triumphant over prejudice and social intolerance, and when the people of the world are seeking upon a new era of genuine brotherhood.

Respectfully yours,
AN AMERICAN CITIZEN.

A Washington man proposes that as the United States was in the war 584 days, a Liberty monument to the memory of our heroes be erected at the capital, one foot in height for each day, making it 584 feet high, with the names of all who gave their lives engraved on bronze tablets to be placed in the interior of the monument.

LOWELL POLO TEAM IS GOING AT FAST CLIP

The Lowell polo team is now traveling at a fast clip, the two new men working in well with the three players, who worked with the championship outfit of last year. When the season opened Capt. Harkins, Griffith, and Purcell, of the team of a year ago, were back in the harness, and the captain informed the writer, that as soon as Mulligan and Asquith became familiar with the Lowell style of play, the success of the team was assured.

Last week Mulligan, the speedy rusher, came into his own, under the expert training of Harkins and Griffith; Asquith, too, showed marked improvement over his previous week's play and the team had a most successful week.

The locals face a very strenuous week, playing four games at home, one tomorrow night with Providence, and two on Thanksgiving day, Lawrence being here for the afternoon and evening. Then on Friday night the rejuvenated Boston team with Fred Jean at the helm will be our opponents.

"Bellicose Barney" Coming: Tomorrow night will mark the first visit of the season for the Providence clan, led by the bellicose Barney Doherty, and as this team always forced Lowell to the limit a great game is in prospect. In addition to "Kid" Doherty, the lineup will include "Lanky" Harry Thompson, Kehoe, Mulhearn and Lovegreen.

The transfer of Cambridge to Lawrence was the feature of last week's developments. The acquisition of the down-river city should prove a great boost to the league, for it's a red hot sporting town and took to polo last year, like a duck takes to water. Yes, our neighbors went wild over the game, and when Lowell invaded the town, all hands turned out.

And such games! They were the talk of both teams all year. Now that our rivals are with us again we may expect to see a return of those famous battles. Capt. Hardy and Bill Blount, who were with Lawrence last year, have been secured through a deal with Boston, but Fred Jean, who played with Lawrence a year ago, goes to the Hub, and Pence, last year with Providence, will also go to Boston, filling the vacancies caused by the sale of Hardy and Blount.

All the teams are now beginning to strengthen up the weak points and the coming week will see several new faces in the different lineups. The pace is getting faster every day and with the war over, the outlook for a big season is very bright.

LAWRENCE WINS FIRST GAME FROM LOWELL

LAWRENCE, Nov. 25.—With a great crowd looking on, the first game of the local roller polo season was played here Saturday night, Lawrence winning, 3 to 2.

The Lowell team was entitled to a tie at the end of three periods. In the second period, Referee Burkett failed to see Ahern's drive which sent the ball through the side of the cage, breaking the wirework. Burkett was arguing with Griffith at the time, and his only knowledge of what happened was that the ball was within the Lawrence cage. The Lowell crowd and the players protested vigorously, but Burkett refused to change his decision.

Lawrence sticks, and Buckley succeeded him.

Whitting, Hardy and Ahern scored the Lawrence goals, while Mulligan and Harkins hammered through Lowell's brace. The lineup and summary:

Blount 5g
Summary: Score, Lawrence 3, Lowell 2. Rushes, Mulligan 4, O'Brien 3, Harkins 3, Slops, Purcell 35, Blount 43, Foul, Hardy. Referee, Burkett.

TELEPHONE HEAD ON JOB

President Spaulding, Back From the War, Resumes Command Again

An interesting letter has been received at the local branch of the New England Telephone and Telegraph company from the president of the company, Philip L. Spaulding, who entered the United States army, serving in France with the rank of major. The letter addressed to the employees, dated Nov. 20, is self explanatory, and reads as follows:

A year ago last month the directors of the company granted me leave of absence to enter the military service of the country in the Great War, and now that the armistice has been signed and hostilities have ceased, I am allowed to return to the Telephone company and I am very glad to be with you all again.

My first duty, in resuming my work as president of the company, and, indeed, my greatest pleasure, is to express to you all—to those who directed the operations and to those who performed the work itself—my sincere appreciation of all your efforts and my hearty congratulations upon the results you have obtained these extraordinary and difficult times.

In particular, I must tell you what an inspiration it was to hear of the magnificent work you did for the people during the recent influenza epidemic, and I know the satisfaction that must have come to you all in real service to mankind such as this.

I have always been proud of the New England organization, and no doubt has ever existed in my mind as to your ability to meet conditions as they arise; and so, while I am not surprised at the reports I have received from all sides, I am very pleased at all you have accomplished, and I want to say to each and all of you—well done!

P. L. SPALDING, President.

New Telephone Books
When asked this morning in regard to the reason for the change in the style of the new telephone books, distributed within the last few days, Charles J. Leathers, manager of the Lowell office, said: "One reason is because it is more convenient to handle, in that one does not need to fumble through the book in an endeavor to secure the names and numbers which are most generally wanted, namely those coming under the Lowell head. Then again, we have been under government instruction, and an order to conserve paper was another cause. The signing of the armistice does not immediately affect the observance of advice received from government officials. Personally, I consider that the new book is a decided improvement over the old one. I regard it in the same light as the 'survivor' which we used to issue, the last being published in 1913. The main difficulty which confronted us, was in calling in these small books, which were very popular and proved of valuable assistance as a guide, because in them were compiled just the local numbers. With this in mind, it would seem to me that the new book should receive a hearty welcome.

Just as the large mills issue the social activities of employees, and facsimile of a circular published monthly, called 'Telephone Topics,' and in the November issue is to be found comment on the good work of the Lowell force. Miss Bessie Lynch, a toll operator, is cited for loyalty in staying at her job, during the time of the epidemic, even when requested by her mother, that she remain home, because she was not well enough to work. The following extracts are from Telephone Topics:

"With from ten to twenty operators out day after day, the operators handled 28 per cent more toll business than during normal times. The local business was equally as heavy. One Sunday the load was 58 per cent more than normal."

"One Sunday Miss Mary Campbell started some work on her pay-roll. Because of the heavy load on the switchboard, she put on a telephone toll operator. As Miss Campbell expressed it, 'I did not have the heart to sit over at my desk working on the pay-roll, knowing that the operators were working so hard at the board.'"

"Many former operators volunteered their services and the plant department did good work in the number of emergency installations."

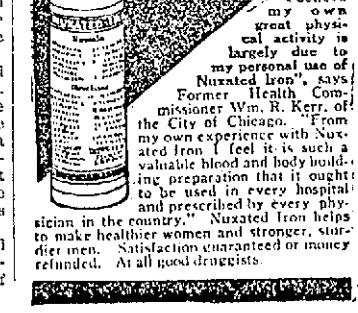

HUNS GIVE UP MORE U-BOATS

Germans Surrender 28 More Submarines, Including Four Big Ones

Deutschland Among Those Turned Over—2 American Officers Freed

HARWICH, Eng., Nov. 24. (By A. P.)—In the presence of Sir Eric Geddes, first lord of the admiralty, 23 more German U-boats surrendered today.

This was the most imposing flotilla to haul down the German flag thus far.

It included several very large submarines and four of the cruiser type, one being nearly 350 feet in length. The noted cruiser submarine Deutschland U-153 was among the number. She carried two American officers who had been rescued from the American army cargo ship Ticonderoga, torpedoed on Sept. 30 last. The officers were taken to Kiel by the Deutschland, which was returning from a three months' cruise in American waters, and were landed today at Harwich.

Another surrendered boat was the U-139, which had just returned to a German port after a 64 days' cruise, commanded by Commander Arnaud de la Perriere, who in 1916 was awarded the Ordre pour le Merite for sinking 125 vessels. The U-139, however, was brought in by a first lieutenant, who explained that Perriere was too sad to undertake the duty.

There is no available record of a German submarine cruiser Deutschland U-153.

A German submarine, Deutschland arrived at Baltimore from Bremen with a cargo of dyestuffs and mails early in July, 1918, the first submarine to make the 4000-mile trans-Atlantic voyage. That Deutschland was purely a cargo-carrier.

The German submarine U-53 appeared suddenly at Newport, R. I., on Oct. 7, 1918, and after a stay of three hours departed. The next day came reports of the sinking of six vessels off Nantucket by German submarines. A Paris dispatch in December, 1917, reported the capture of the U-53 by French naval forces.

Since Aug. 20, 23 vessels have been sunk off the Atlantic coast of the United States. Only four of these, however, were steamers, the remainder consisting of schooners, fishing boats and two steam trawlers.

The torpedoing and sinking of the American army cargo ship Ticonderoga by a German submarine, with the loss of 11 naval officers and 102 enlisted men on Sept. 30 last, was announced by Secretary of the Navy Daniels on Oct. 11. Two officers, Lieut. F. L. Muller of Oakland, Calif., and Lieut. J. H. Fisher of Princeton, N. C., were taken aboard the submarine as prisoners, Secretary Daniels announced.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look to your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

ANOTHER LOWELL SOLDIER WOUNDED

Private Edward J. Moore, Co. L, 338th Infantry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Austin E. Moore of 104 Orleans street, has been wounded in action, according to a telegram received by his parents from the war department.

Private Moore went to Camp Devens in September, 1917, and was successively transferred to Camp Gordon, Ga., and Camp Upton, N. Y. He sailed overseas last December. Previously he was employed by the C. I. Hood Co. He was an excellent tenor singer and a member of St. Margaret's choir.

Tried to Escape After Taken on U-Boat—Swam Rhine and Escaped

LONDON, Nov. 24.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press)—Here is the story of Lieut. E. V. Isaacs of the United States navy, watch officer of the American transport President Lincoln when that vessel was torpedoed in the Atlantic on May 31 last. He was captured by the German submarine which sank the ship. When off the Scandinavian coast he attempted to swim ashore, but was caught. On his way to a prison camp in Germany he jumped from a train but was recaptured. He escaped from the prison and swam across the Rhine river to safety in Switzerland.

The story has been told briefly in the Associated Press despatches but its details are so filled with the spirit of adventure as to be well worth the telling.

When the President Lincoln went to the bottom of the ocean Lieutenant Isaacs, who is from Cresco, Iowa, climbed upon a raft. Soon afterward the submarine emerged and her commander d-mounded the captain of the President Lincoln as prisoner. The survivors told him they believed the captain had gone down with the ship, not that they were aware of that, but to save, if possible, the captain being taken prisoner.

Ordered Aboard U-Boat

While this was going on, Lieut. Isaacs said, he lay on the raft with his arms under him to hide the officer's stripes on his uniform but without success, and he was ordered aboard the submarine. It was the U-60 and her commander, Capt. Remy, had resided in the United States and England and spoke English fluently.

"Apparently Remy had been affected by our civilization," said the lieutenant, "as he treated me pleasantly while inquiring as to the whereabouts of the skipper of the Lincoln. I was told that I would tell him where he could find our captain or go to Germany myself as a prisoner. I could not conform to his first command and of course would not have had I been able to."

The young officer said that he was given a good bunk on the submarine and four good meals daily including meat, eggs and real coffee. The following day as the submarine was cruising about seeking new victims she was sighted by two American destroyers.

Depth Bombs Scared Huns

"While the destroyers were plunging toward us we were getting under water as rapidly as possible and finally stopped at a depth of 60 meters," Lieutenant Isaacs said. "When the depth bombs began exploding every German was at his station tense and pretty badly scared. Now and then a junior officer would sing out to the captain that a destroyer was about so far away to starboard or port, as the case might have been. They were recording the positions with their listening devices. Then would come a depth charge. It is difficult to describe just the sensation, but seemed to me much like a dog shaking a rat and it was anything but pleasant to be in the rat. With each explosion a look of horror would flash over the faces of the Germans, for they expected every moment that one of the charges would be fired a bit closer and they knew their craft could not withstand it."

Caught Trying to Escape

Too many destroyers were in that area for comfort, so Remy headed for the Kiel canal the next night. When off the Scandinavian coast Lieutenant Isaacs said he decided to attempt to swim to shore when the submarine approached territorial waters. With his life-belt on, he was just slipping over the side shortly after midnight when he was discovered by Remy himself.

I pulled aboard. On arrival at Wilhelmshaven he was kept several days on a submarine "mole" and three days in a land prison, carefully guarded and badly fed. During this time he was taken to the German battleship Kaiser Wilhelm II, the flagship of the fleet, and questioned by a staff officer.

Dictaphones in Room

"I finally told him that the United States would send so many men to France that the battle lines wouldn't hold them," said the lieutenant. "I was then taken to Karlsruhe and placed in a hotel room by myself the first day. The next day I was put into another room with eight French officers, it having been learned in the meantime that I spoke French. These rooms I afterward learned were known as the 'listening rooms' and they were rightly named. The Frenchmen and I found three dictaphones and destroyed them. The next day I was placed in a room with three British officers and there were dictaphones in that room."

After a few days at Karlsruhe, the lieutenant was started for a preliminary distributing camp at Villingen, Baden. In the railway carriage with him were two guards. He was unaware of conditions at the Villingen camp, and decided to try to get away from the train if the slightest opportunity came.

"One of the guards seemed to be dozing while the other was interested in something out of the other side of the carriage, when I dove through the carriage window," the officer said. "The train was moving more rapidly than I believed, for I received an awful bump on the head and both of my knees were cut on the iron ties of the parallel track."

"I scrambled into the brush as best I could. Very soon bullets were whistling about me as the train had been stopped and guards were on my trail. I could not make speed in the condition I was in, so to save my life I held up my hands in token of surrender when the Germans were about 75 yards away."

When they came up to me one of them welcomed me with a blow with his rifle. I was beaten and kicked and knocked down seven or eight times be-here they finally loaded me back into the train.

"Arriving at the camp I was swathed in paper bandages—they have very little cloth in Germany you know. Had it not been for food supplied by the Red Cross I'm sure I would have starved to death but with that we fared very well and within a month I had regained my strength. There were about 150 Russian officers and 75 American officers in the camp."

Lieutenant Isaacs and other officers immediately began to lay plans for escape by collecting necessary articles, such as pieces of wire and rope and short boards with which to make a ladder if necessary. They also traded some of their food to a Russian for a pair of wire cutters he had smuggled into the camp. Three different times they had their escape plans completed, each time with the connivance of a Russian, and each time they had reason to believe the Germans had been apprised and they did not try.

"Finally we learned that they were to take all the Russians away on Oct. 7 and, working without the Russians, we planned to try again on the night of October 6. Fifteen feet from our barred windows was a high barbed wire fence which turned inward at the top much the same as at our internment camps in the states. Between the fence and our window was a ditch seven feet wide filled with scrapped barbed wire. We had almost severed the bars of the window in the room, in which I was imprisoned, using an improvised saw one of the officers had obtained from a Russian."

"Two other officers with me were to use two tennis court markers, eighteen feet long, as a bridge from our window to the top of the barbed-wire fence. The wooden markers which we calculated would barely hold us when strapped together were to be brought into our room after the roll-call at night."

"We figured that soon after the attempt the guards would be attracted from the main gate, so three officers elected to try a dash there at the proper moment. Three others were to attempt to get through the fence with the wire cutters, while two others planned to get over. We had fixed the electric-light wires so that we could quickly short-circuit them. This was to be done exactly at 10:30 o'clock, when every man was to be ready to go."

"I will tell the name of only one of the officers, as I do not know the fate of the others. He was Corporal Harold B. Willis of Boston, a member of the Lafayette Escadrille. He was one of those who were to dash through the gate, and he and I had a rendezvous two miles from camp."

"When the lights were extinguished by the short-circuiting, we forced the bars as quietly as possible, and ran out the two markers strapped together, and darkened with shoe-blackening as much as possible in the short time we had. There was no moon but the sky was clear."

"One of the window bars stuck, and we made considerable noise forcing it, but it didn't take us long to start the risky trip to the top of the fence. I got outside all right, but there were guards both to my right and left. There were no protecting trees, so I ran as fast as I could with bullets whistling about me."

"I met Willis at the rendezvous and we set out southwest. We traveled at night, slept in the day and lived on raw vegetables we took from gardens. At last we reached the Rhine at a point between Schaffhausen and Basle."

"We found that at every place where we might approach the bank it was thoroughly guarded. We decided then to find a creek if possible and wade down it until we struck the Rhine. The current in the one we found was very swift and the water cold. Willis had just taken off most his clothes for the plunge into the Rhine, when he was swept away by the current which at that point moved about 12 kilometers an hour."

"It was an awful trip in the cold water with eddies swirling me around, and at one time I turned on my back to float as long as possible. It seemed that it was impossible to bring that bank any closer with my waning strength. Finally I was fortunate enough to be caught in an eddy that swept me to the shore."

"When able to walk, I found a farm house and was warmly welcomed by the Swiss peasants. I told them of Willis and asked them to send someone down the bank to look for him. A short distance down the road the peasant met one of his neighbors who had come to look for me. Willis had landed much the same as I had, was treated as I had been by another peasant, and had sent a messenger for me just as I had for him. Willis went to France and I assume has joined his command by this time."

BOSTON, Nov. 25.—Blackstone park, between Shawmut avenue and Washington street, was apparently visited yesterday morning by an unwelcome animal. Persons living in the vicinity and passersby believe that a polecat jumped out of a barrel in a market gardener's auto inward bound from Greenbush, when a tire blew out. A cat, or some animal was seen to leap from the wagon and to run across the park. Several said it was a skunk. At any rate, two minutes later there was an unbearable odor in the park.

LOWELL ROLL OF HONOR

—IN THE—
City Directory

The Roll of Honor carried in the Lowell Directory of 1918 will be enlarged to include those who have gone into war service since that Roll was compiled.

For patriotic and historical reasons this list should be complete. It is appropriate it should be bound into the City Directory, which is the annual record of the city's life, where it may always be found and consulted by present and future generations. The publishers request your co-operation to this end.

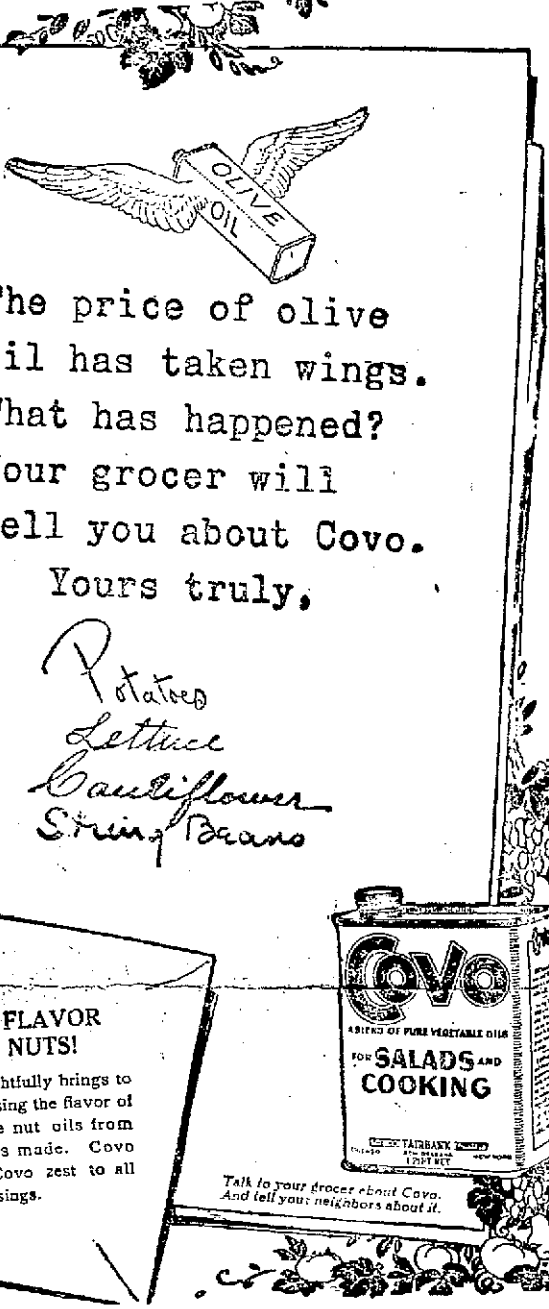

Pastors of churches, officers of lodges, and corporations and employers, are asked to send in their individual Rolls of Honor, and relatives and friends of those in the service are requested to send in the names of such as they may know of. The publishers are especially eager to receive such names as would not be found on local lists, such as the local draft board lists and recruiting station lists. This would include the names of such as have enlisted in the Canadian and British armies, or in other armies, in the various college units, in the Red Cross, in Y. M. C. A. and K. of C. work, etc.

Your help in compiling this information is a duty to the absent and is for the honor of Lowell. Please be prompt.

Establishment of Czechoslovak Republic One of Striking Romances of War

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—Sifted out of the heart of northern Austria and Hungary by the sword of war, the Czechoslovak republic, youngest recognized member of the allied family of nations, is in reality a merger under democratic government of the ancient Bohemian, Moravian, Silesian and Slav kingdoms, subjected for almost 300 years to Teuton and Magyar domination.

The rebirth of Czech and Slav independence forms one of the most striking romances of the war. For centuries Bohemia stood in the forefront of European culture, giving the world the Christian martyrs and educators, Huss and Jerome of Prague, the poet Kollar, the linguist and teacher Comenius, and, in the field of art, Brozik, the painter, and the musician Dvorak with many others whose deeds have found places in history. Hardly less advanced was the civilization of her sister states.

With such inspiration, the Czechoslovaks retained, despite Austrian oppression, a national organization, and were prepared even before the start of the conflict now terminated by armistice to strike the blows that have given them freedom.

They opposed the mobilization of the Austrian army, resisted induction of their manhood, despite court-martial and wholesale executions, and throughout the war obstructed and undermined the Austrian administration. From their ranks, through desertion or capture, thousands of fighting men found their way into the Russian and Italian armies, where they turned and fought the power that had conscripted them. By their spirit and efficiency as soldiers they gained recognition by the allies of Czechoslovak units, and before the war ended more than 100,000 Czechoslovak troops, under their own commanders, were embattled for the allied cause in France, Italy, European Russia and Siberia.

In Russia the Czechoslovaks have 80,000 men under arms, some recruited from the demobilized Russian army, others deserters from the Austrian forces or former Austrian prisoners of Russia released by the Kerensky or Bolshevik governments. The Czechoslovak force in Italy is 20,000 strong, composed wholly of individuals or units from the Austrian army taken prisoner by the Italians. In France the organization numbers 11,000, including 6,000 men from the Czech army in Russia and 5,000 volunteers from the United States.

Czechoslovaks are ruling their liberated countrymen from their capital in Prague today because they fostered through generations the flickering flame of freedom which Austria and Hungary attempted to snuff out in 1621. They maintained a succession of secret political organizations, culminating in that which set afoot active opposition to Austria in the early days of the war, and, through propaganda conducted among emigrants in Russia, laid the foundation for the independent Czechoslovak force which has held for more than a year the Volga front, preventing the Germans and Bolsheviks from drawing on the food supplies of Siberia.

Of new nations formed or in process of formation through the upheaval of war, the Czechoslovak was the first to win allied recognition, and the only one so far fully recognized by America. Existing only on paper as long as the Hapsburg dynasty remained in power, the republic became an actuality with the dissolution of the Austro-Hungarian empire. Its president, Professor Thomas G. Masaryk, formerly of the University of Prague and lately stationed in Washington, through Dr. Karel Kramarz, the vice president, for years a political prisoner charged with treason against Austria, and his associates in Prague, is administering the affairs of 13,000,000 people occupying 48,000 square miles of territory (approximately the size of New York state).

Extending from Saxony and Bavaria on the west to Ungvar and the Carpathian mountains on the east, a distance of 320 miles, Czechoslovakia cuts a swath 120 miles wide into the former Austro-Hungarian domain. Its western half, comprising the one-time Austrian provinces of Bohemia, Moravia and Silesia, follows the borders of Saxony and Prussia on the north and skirts Bavaria on the south until the Austrian boundary is reached, when it swings 30 miles north of Vienna to the March river. The eastern half, formerly the Hungarian province of Slovakia, follows the Danube from Pressburg to the river Ipa, 20 miles north of Budapest, where it turns northeastward to the Carpathians. From Ungvar, the eastern limit, the line follows the old Galician border west to the Prussian line 30 miles west of Cracow. The new state effectively cuts Hungary off from its former province, Galicia, which is now claimed by Poland.

The republic boasts the University of Prague, long a centre of eastern European culture. With independence, its representatives in this country declare, another university, for which large funds already have been subscribed,

Bringing You Better Meat More Economically

WHEN your dealer comes here to select the meats he sells you, he finds a wide variety and the best of quality. He can exercise his choice, winter or summer, as the supply of fresh and sweet meat is constant, brought in refrigerator cars and held in the Branch House at just the right temperature until needed.

And the cost of the service is exceptionally low. If, for instance, retailers depended on long-distance express shipments, or slow and uncertain freight delivery, the expense would be as high or higher than it costs to maintain the Armour Branch House here.

Under such conditions there would necessarily be a certain per cent of spoilage. This the dealer would have to charge and you would find it in your meat-bills.

Then there's the question of freight. Small shipments cost more than carload lots. Armour's shipments are in carload lots—in quantities not alone for one dealer but scores of dealers. This means an appreciable saving to all dealers, and, therefore, to YOU.

So the Armour Branch House here insures you meat scientifically prepared and properly handled, and, further, helps to hold down its cost to YOU and your dealer. Armour service is economical and efficient; all year 'round it affords you variety and unchanging quality.

GOVERNMENT SEEKS TO CONTROL WIRELESS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Permanent government control of all radio communication through the acquisition and operation by the navy department of all shore wireless stations in the United States used for commercial purposes is planned by the administration under a bill now before congress.

Representative Alexander, chairman of the house merchant marine committee, who introduced the measure in the house, announced yesterday that hearings on the bill will begin before this committee Dec. 12 and continue until all interests have been given an opportunity to be heard. A similar bill, introduced in the senate by Chairman Fletcher of the committee on commerce, has been approved by President Wilson.

Besides providing for the acquisition and operation of the stations by the navy, the bill directs that the secretary of the navy shall, so far as may be consistent with the transaction of government business, open radio stations to general public business, under regulations prescribed by him, and shall fix the rates for such service. He also shall establish special rates for the handling of press dispatches by trans-oceanic or other special stations.

Commercial business has been handled through some naval wireless stations for four years, and since the nation entered the war, all stations have been and still are being operated by the navy. Stations taken over after the declaration of war included the big plants at Sayville, L. I., and Tuckerton, N. J., which were said to have been financed by Germany.

The navy recently completed the most powerful radio plant in this country at Annapolis. Another station is being built on the South Atlantic coast. On the Pacific coast it operates stations at San Francisco and San Diego.

Provision for Compensation

For any stations acquired under the proposed law or those which may be closed permanently just compensation is to be paid. In case of disagreement as to the amount of this compensation the secretary of the navy shall make an offer. If this is refused he will pay three-fourths of it pending final adjustment of the claim in the courts.

Reasons why the government regards it as necessary for the navy to operate or control radio stations in this country are given in a statement prepared by officials of the navy department and made public today by Representative Alexander. The statement in part says:

"In general the bill provides for the acquisition and operation by the navy department of all radio stations on shore used for commercial purposes. Irrespective of the general subject of government ownership, this principle is clearly indicated as necessary in the case of this particular public utility.

"Since the early days of the use of radio-telegraphy many companies have tried to operate radio stations as a commercial enterprise in the United States generally, or in certain localities. Except in very special circumstances, these enterprises have failed to make an adequate return and in most cases no profits had been made except through the sale of stock. The reason for this is that a complete monopoly is necessary. A period of about 18 years has clearly demonstrated that the United States is the only country able to obtain and maintain such a monopoly.

Signals an International Matter

"The part played by high-power stations in this war and before the United States became a party to it, shows very clearly the necessity for governmental operation of these stations.

"Cable communication is secret, while signals from radio stations are transmitted equally in all directions and all nations can readily read the business of all others.

"Signals from high-power stations become international matter at once. Only by the most careful regulation of radio traffic, through international agreement, can the maximum good be obtained, and only by each nation having the operation of radio stations under its control can international agreements be properly executed.

"This bill is not to create a complete government monopoly. The scientist, manufacturer and ship owner are specially provided for and no change is proposed in their status under existing special communication and these are exempted from government operation."

20,000 MEN SING AT CAMP DEVENS' CARNAVAL—BIG EVENTS ON DAYS' PROGRAM

CAMP DEVENS, Nov. 25.—People began to arrive here Sunday night so as to be here today to witness the big military carnival staged by the men of the Plymouth Division. Bright and early this morning they were out on the rifle range to watch the opening of the first event, the rifle competitions. Rooms are at a premium and people are seeking shelter in surrounding towns.

Special trains left the North station, Boston, at 8.35 this morning for Camp Devens, getting the visitors here by 9.30. The biggest event in today's program was the demonstration of machine guns, rifle and hand grenades, one-pounder cannon and trench mortars. These were held at the completion of the rifle contests. The other big event was the division "sing," the first that has ever been staged here, when 20,000 men, accompanied by a band of nearly 200 pieces, sang war songs.

Gov. McCall Also Expected

Not one thing more is necessary to the cup of joy of the division to overflowing and that is the presence some time during the carnival of Maj. Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, former commander of the now famous Yankee Division. They also hope to have with them Gov. Samuel W. McCall and the other New England governors who will participate in the reception to Gen. Edwards. Gen. McCain has given Gen. Edwards an invitation to be present and he has also asked the governor to come.

Next Sunday there will not be so many visitors here, for just double the number of men who went home for the week-end will go next week, and many a Thanksgiving dinner will be eaten next Sunday instead of on Thursday.

Officers for Regular Army

A board of officers has been convened to meet at this camp to examine into and report upon the capacity, qualifications, conduct and efficiency of such provisional and temporary officers of the regular army as may be ordered to appear before it. They will make recommendations as to the fitness and suitability of such officers for promotion and appointment, and as to whether or not their provisional or temporary commissions shall be terminated at once. The personnel of this board is Col. Osmond Latrobe, 42d Infantry; Col. O. H. Dockery, Jr., 74th Infantry; Lieut. Col. Samuel G. Talbot, 73d Infantry; Maj. George J. Richards, 212th Engineers, and 1st Lieut. Maurice G. Stubbs, 42d Infantry, recorder.

It is the understanding that many of the officers here who desire to remain in the regular army will be brought before this board.

Private Harry Hanks of the 33d Company, 9th Battalion, Depot Brigade, whose home address is Hinesburg, Vt., died at the base hospital yesterday morning.

Letters From Lowell Soldiers

The following is an interesting letter from Priv. Gilbert Gendron, Company M, 101st Infantry, written to his mother, Mrs. Euclide Gendron of 732 Moody street. Priv. Gilbert Gendron is one of the four sons of Mr. and Mrs. Gendron, who are with the A.E.F. in France.

Dear Mother:—

Just a few lines to let you know that I'm feeling well, hoping you and the rest of the family are the same. I am not writing very often because writing paper is very scarce, but today I found an opportunity to purchase a few sheets and my first thought is "home." A few days ago I saw a few of the boys from Alphonse's company and they said his address I sent you is correct. Write to him as soon as possible and place my address on the back of the envelope, so if he doesn't receive it I will. As soon as I am through with this letter I will write to Alphonse and to Corp. Jack Donovan, the "cop" who used to patrol our district. I saw his picture in "The Sun" the other day and I know just about where he is. I also read in "The Sun" about Alphonse's marriage and that was some news for me. I bet Pa is proud of his four boys who are in the service and he is throwing out a chest. Well if we all come back and with God's help we will, he will be prouder than ever. Keep on praying, for your prayers are doing us good. In relation to the prayers that are being said at home by the folks of the boys of the 101st, this is what Rev. Fr. O'Connor, our chaplain, said recently after hearing some of the boys say "Gee, it's funny how lucky the 101st regiment is." "I'll tell you boys, it's not luck, it is the prayers that the folks at home are saying, for the boys over here, for God does not throw down prayers."

I had a little accident last night, but was not injured bad enough to be sent to the hospital. I fell from the second story, but fortunately escaped with minor injuries. I suppose that it looks pretty bright in the United States at present, for over here we are all under the impression that it won't be long before we will return home. The enclosed coupon is for a Christmas box. I am sending it so that you may use it if you wish. I will now close wishing to be with you before long.

Among the many brave soldiers who sleep while poppies blow in Flanders' fields is Lieut. Robert Moores of Woodstock, N. B. This young hero of the Maritime Provinces has a sister and two aunts living in this city. His sister is Mrs. Frank Walsh, of 68 Lombard street. His aunts, Miss Edith and Miss Ethel Moores live in upper Middlesex street.

Lieutenant Moores went "over there" in 1911 and after being in the trenches many months he was sent to an officers' training school where he received his commission. He then returned to the trenches where he manifested gallantry and bravery in action on several occasions. He was the star and hero of his regiment and won a military cross for his conduct on the 16th of August, when he received the wounds to which he afterwards succumbed. He did not live to know that the military cross had been awarded him, but it will be sent to his dear mother who will treasure it as the undisputable token of her gallant son's death on the field of battle in the great war for humanity, justice and democracy.

Moores had just passed his 18th birthday when he enlisted and he has a brother in France now who is not yet 17 and he has been fighting a year or more. He has another brother who, after arriving in France, was stricken with pneumonia and had to be sent home, the disease rendering him unfit for battle.

Mrs. Moores who, at her quiet home in Woodstock, N. B., mourns the loss of her gallant son, has received the following very beautiful letter from his commanding officer, a letter that will comfort her in the days to come:

31st of Oct., in the Field.

My Dear Mrs. Moores:—

It is with very great pride that I write to inform you that a military cross has been awarded to your very gallant son for his conduct on the 16th of August last, when he received the wounds to which he afterwards succumbed. He had endeavored himself to all by his unfailing cheerfulness and sunny disposition whilst his fearless courage and coolness had earned him the respect and admiration of officers and men. In my opinion he was one of the finest officers the regiment has ever had and I can assure you that our standard is high.

You can understand how glad we were that his services have been rewarded even after his death and our regret is all the keener that he did not live to wear his decoration. Many officers of the regiment have fallen, but none with greater sorrow among their comrades in this great service.

Will you excuse my long delay in writing to you but we have been very busy. I have been hard to find an opportunity. You should write to the Canadian Record office, Army Post Office, England, for your son's cross and they will send it to you.

Please accept my very deep sympathy in your sorrow, which we, his comrades, share fully with you in your loss.

Yours Sincerely,
W. K. CHANDLER,
Lieutenant Colonel,
Commanding 43d Can. Batt.

REPORT ON WAR GARDEN WORK IN LOWELL

The Lowell committee on war gardens held a meeting yesterday afternoon at the office of the park department and received a report from Jesse H. Sheppard, the chairman, and Charles T. Upton, supervisor, on the work done

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Need Help to Pass the Crisis Safely—Proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Can be Relied Upon.

Urbana, Ill.—"During Change of Life, in addition to its annoying symptoms, I had an attack of grippe which lasted all winter and left me in a weakened condition. I felt at times that I would never be well again. I read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it did for women passing through the Change of Life, so I told my doctor I would try it. I soon began to gain in strength and the annoying symptoms disappeared and your Vegetable Compound has made me a well, strong woman so I do all my own housework. I cannot recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly to women passing through the Change of Life."

Mrs. FRANK HENSON, 1316 S. Orchard St., Urbana, Ill.

Women who suffer from nervousness, "heat flashes," backache, headaches and "the blues" should try this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

here in 1918. The report is a most interesting one and shows in a detailed manner just how much Lowell has contributed in the huge task of feeding the allied nations during a period of the great war. The report is as follows:

On Sunday evening, March 3, a lecture was given at Grace church by Warren H. Sice of the Middlesex county farm bureau on the subject of food production. After the lecture the following men were organized, under the direction of the public safety committee as a sub-committee to care for the war garden work: Lewis E. MacBrayne, Harvey B. Greene, John W. Kernan, Roy H. E. Benton, William W. Dennett, Henry Harris, Clarence M. Weed, Charles T. Upton and Jesse H. Sheppard. At a meeting held a week later Mr. Sheppard was elected chairman and Mr. Charles T. Upton was appointed director and supervisor.

I became the immediate duty of the chairman and the supervisor to secure a list of applicants for garden lots and to ascertain the localities where they were desired; this was done by reading notices in the papers and by following up each person who had a garden the previous year, visiting or corresponding with all of them. During this time, and following the registration of applicants, a systematic canvass was made among the owners of such tracts of suitable land for garden work as were conveniently located and large enough to be economically prepared. There were 38 owners who gave us free use of their land for the garden work. These lots made up 20 tracts, distributed in every section of the city, giving fairly convenient opportunity for all applicants.

These tracts were measured and plotted and subdivided into lots of about 5000 feet each and were plowed and harrowed and put into condition for garden cultivation. For this work teams with drivers were hired from local teamsters at prevailing rates, which were about one-third higher than the previous year. The necessary farm tools were loaned to us by different city departments and by private owners. Usually the land required dressing of some kind to insure fair crops and therefore we made a contract for commercial fertilizer at low rates, to be delivered in 100 lb. bags at each tract when we were ready for it.

In distributing the lots to the applicants, those who had a lot last year were given the choice to use the same lot again, whenever it was possible for us to do so. To the other applicants the choice of the remaining lots was given in the order of the date of their application. All applicants for specific localities were notified to meet us on the ground, at a stated time, prepared to pay five dollars for each lot, to cover the cost of preparing the land and of 100 lbs. of fertilizer. The applicant at that time selected his lot, paid his money and signed a mutual contract, wherein he agreed to properly plant and care for his garden, under penalty of the forfeiture of land and crops if he neglected to do so. We agreed on the part of the committee that, so far as we had rights in the land, he should have the undisturbed use of it.

There were 323 garden lots prepared, allotted and cultivated under our direction and supervision, covering over 40 acres, producing crops estimated to be worth more than $10,000. About 50 per cent. of the area was planted in potatoes, about 20 per cent. in other root crops and the balance in corn, beans and quick growing crops which in many cases were raised in rotation. The committee made no stipulation as to the variety of crops that should be planted.

The gardeners were mostly men of some experience and despite the weeds, the bugs, the lice and other discouraging features, they were well repaid for their labor and a large addition was made to the local food supply.

As will be seen by our financial report, we expended in this work $227 and received $1757; the expense exceeding the income by $450, which deficit was paid by the public safety committee.

As a feature of the preliminary spring work we gave out much literature on garden making and cultivation; a very interesting and practical talk was given on this subject one evening by Mr. A. B. Jenks of the Middlesex county farm bureau, to which all garden applicants were invited and which was largely attended. Following the talk an hour was spent in questions and discussions and it was very encouraging to see the interest manifested by the people present. In our work of getting useful garden information to the applicants we were greatly assisted by the state board of war gardens, the Middlesex County farm bureau, the Lowell board of trade and by the war work and food conservation committee.

very encouraging results which were obtained the previous year in the school gardens it was considered desirable that, so far as possible, the work should be continued; also that the women residing where gardens could be made should operate home gardens. The enrollment of the school children under Miss Alice T. In our endeavor to carry out the purpose of the war garden work we have been greatly assisted by other members of the committee and the public in general. We are especially indebted to the park committee who gave us free use of their office for our headquarters. Mr. Kernan, the park superintendent, gave us great help in many ways, the newspapers published for us many articles relative to the work and rendered us valuable assistance in giving information to the public and the garden applicants; especially would we speak of the patriotic service rendered by the owners of the land used for the gardens, given for this purpose without pay and many times at a disadvantage to the owner.

BULGARIANS DEPORTED

82,000 GREEKS

SALONIKI, Saturday, Nov. 23.—The Bulgarians during their occupation of eastern Macedonia, deported 82,000 Greek residents, according to official Bulgarian documents in the possession of St. Djanopoulos, sub-prefect of Darnitsa. He was deported himself and compelled to work in the central bureau of deported persons at Chouma on account of his knowledge of the Bulgarian language. It was there he obtained the official documents.

A large number of those deported, he said, succumbed to famine, torture and enforced labor. At Kichevo a number of Greeks were burned alive under the pretext that they had the typhus malarie.

After the Bulgarian capitulation the conditions of the deported Greeks improved somewhat, but the Bulgarian authorities forbade the prefect to visit the camps. He went to several camps, however, and found the Greeks suffering greatly from thirst, the Bulgarians having refused to give them sufficient water.

BRUSSELS, Saturday, Nov. 23 (By A. P.).—Cardinal Mercier and Burgomaster Max, two of the most prominent figures of the war in Belgium, excepting King Albert, received the Associated Press correspondent today. The men are as different physically and mentally as the ideas, ideals and opinions they represent. Burgomaster Max being one of the leaders of the liberal party, while Cardinal Mercier is the most prominent Catholic in Belgium.

"You have saved us," said the cardinal, when asked what he thought about America's participation in the war. "You have saved the world."

Cardinal Mercier is tall and dignified. He was garbed in a purple soutane. He chatted with the correspondent more than half an hour.

"I never despaired. I never lost hope, although at times my heart was very full," the cardinal said, referring to an incident in December, 1914, when Baron von Bissing, military governor of Belgium, virtually made him a prisoner in his episcopal palace.

"I received a telegram from the Associated Press and have never been able to answer it. I wish to reply to it now."

"Yes, Bissing treated me as a prisoner for four days."

Concerning the governors of Belgium during the war, Cardinal Mercier said that Falkenhausen was more cruel and inhuman than Bissing and more perfidious, insidious and dangerous.

"There was not much to choose between them, however," he said.

Referring to his quite recent birthday anniversary, the correspondent complimented the cardinal upon his robust appearance and health. The cardinal replied: "It is true that I am 67, but rather it is my 71st, because the last four years seemed like eight to me."

Burgomaster Max was more reticent and refused to speak concerning his treatment by the Germans, refusing even to mention the word Germany.

"I don't wish to pose as a martyr," said the burgomaster. "I wish to forget the past and think of the future."

Burgomaster Max asked the correspondent to convey his thanks to America and Americans for the tributes of sympathy and offers of aid from the United States.

Antonio Souza and Frank R. Roche were charged with disturbing the peace, the disturbance consisting of a rough and tumble fight at the corner of Tremont and Moody streets last night. They each drew down $10 fines.

Cases of drunkenness at the police court were as follows: Adelard Cote, $10 fine; Thebe Phillips, two months in jail; Thomas J. Flather, $10 fine; William Latock, $15 fine. POLICE COURT NEWS

The case of Frank L. Dwyer of Lawrence, charged with manslaughter, was called in police court this morning, but inasmuch as no report has as yet been made on the inquest it was again continued, this time to Dec. 9. Dwyer, it is alleged, was the driver of a machine which crashed into a pole near the corner of First and Christian sts. on the night of Nov. 8, as a result of which Patrick Conroy, who was a passenger in the car, received injuries which caused his death.

Samuel McDonald and Mary Simoneau were found guilty of a statutory offense and the woman was sentenced to three months in jail. McDonald was ordered to pay a fine of $50.

A tall husky youth of 17 years was charged by his mother with being a stubborn child. She testified that the young man does not turn in as much of his pay as he should for the support of the family, and that he also fails to keep good hours. He packed up and left the house a few days ago, she said, and refused to come back.

Judge Enright spoke at some length to the boy on his duties to his mother and the desirability of growing up a useful and respectable citizen. The boy stated that he wanted to enlist in the Merchant Marine service, that he could not get along with his sister, and that it was unreasonable to expect him to get home at 10.30 at night, or any time near that. He was sentenced to the Massachusetts reformatory, and the sentence suspended for one month.

As a result of the activities of Lieut. Pettie and his men Sunday morning, 18 men were held before the court on the charge of being present at a game on the Lord's day.

Those present were John Peradue, Anthony Bakhas, Benny Daksewicz, Michael Romomowski, Peter Daksewicz, Austin Shacca, Stanislaw Candrotas, William Candrotas, Adam Bay Sho, Peter Karaycan, Antonio Bogdanovich, John Casper, Charles Vlizkewski, John Clewiczewicz, Mike Kowlovicz, Mantos Lematis, Adam Spacelas and William Shaka. They were each fined $3.

Nicholas Papademetronopoulos was charged with attempted larceny from the Massachusetts mills. Major Hayes, who appeared as the complainant, testified that Nicholas, who works at the plant, had been found tampering with the indicator clock which was attached to his machine. This clock shows the amount of work done by the machine, the major stated, and does not register if the machine is stopped. As the employees on this type of machine are paid according to the amount of work which the machine produces, when work, Nicholas evaded, he decided to beat the game a little and in order that he would lose no time for the period when his machine was stopped he took off the indicator, and managed to register it up a few additional notches. He was ordered to pay a $15 fine, and advised to use his mechanical ability for other purposes in the future.

William Czalkind, charged with the larceny of 50 pairs of stockings, each valued at 50 cents, was ordered continued until Nov. 27, the amount being set at $200.

Joseph Dalton was found guilty of the larceny of four pieces of candy from Peter Teshonis' store on the night of Nov. 19. He was given a suspended sentence of two months in jail and ordered to pay the costs of the trial.

Let the Children Read the Popular Astronomy Articles of Prof. Garrett P. Serviss

One of the best known and most popular writers on Popular Astronomy the United States has produced is Professor Garrett P. Serviss.

In the late 80's and early 90's Professor Serviss was an editorial writer on the New York Sun.

Subsequently, he lectured extensively in all parts of the country on travel, history and astronomy.

Serviss is the author of "Astronomy With an Opera Glass," "Pleasures of the Telescope," "Other Worlds," "Astronomy With the Naked Eye," "Curiosities of the Sky," "Round the Year With the Stars" and a dozen other books.

Every day or two Professor Serviss writes a newspaper column—important, to be sure, but nevertheless bright, entertaining and informing, on some scientific subject of the moment.

And WHERE are the Serviss articles to be FOUND?

WAR BRIDE FINDS FIELD FOR WOMEN'S WORK

(N. E. A. Special to The Sun)
NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Mrs. Rachel Johnson Curtis, of Holyoke, Mass., has found a new way in which women may serve.

During the long days of demobilization, she is going to conduct, for the Y.W.C.A. and 300 daily newspapers, a department called: "Tips for the Lonely Girl at Home."

Mrs. Curtis is herself a war bride. Her husband enlisted as a second-class seaman in the navy last June. He gave up a job as general manager of a big cotton mill in Holyoke to do his country's uniform. Now he is in the officers' training school and expects a commission soon.

"I was in Europe when the war began," Mrs. Curtis explained. "I have worked in the Liberty Loan and Red Cross campaigns, and done all possible

THE ITALIAN OCCUPATION TROOPS MOVE ON

ROME, Nov. 23.—Italian troops occupied Innsbruck, the capital of the Austrian Tyrol, on Friday, in accordance with the terms of the Austrian armistice. They also took possession of Landeck, west of Innsbruck, on the Inn river.

At Innsbruck the German population, although welcoming the Italians warmly, maintained a calm and respectful attitude. The Italian population came out to meet the Italian troops who were greeted enthusiastically. The city authorities assisted the Italians in establishing Italian control.

The mayor of Bressanone has sent a letter to the Italian military command thanking it for distributing food to the poor of his town.

MARRIED MEN AND THOSE LONGEST IN SERVICE TO RECEIVE FIRST CONSIDERATION

LONDON, November. (Correspondence of the Associated Press).—Married men and those who have been long service in the British army will receive first consideration in the demobilization of British fighting forces, says Dr. Christopher Addison, minister of reconstruction. "Priorities" men, he said, would come back early.

The demobilization, said the minister, should be so conducted that millions of men in the navy and army would have an early opportunity of employment. Accordingly a plan arranged on industrial requirements has been prepared.

As the men are demobilized they will be re-employed in the various industries from which they were withdrawn to enter the army. There will be special facilities giving access to the land, said Dr. Addison. Gardens or larger plots will be provided.

Councils composed of employers and working men have been organized in 40 or 50 different trades. Already these bodies are removing sources of irritation and bringing a spirit of solidarity, a better spirit than prevailed under former agreements, said the minister.

Inasmuch as the necessity for producing as much food as possible does not end with the war, Dr. Addison said, he believed some control over the use of the land would continue to be exercised by the government. Great Britain should manufacture nitrates for manures on a large scale.

The minister declared that unless care was exercised there would be a great deal of speculation while the demobilization of the army was in progress and prices might advance to the great detriment of industry.

CLOTHING FOR BELGIANS

Ransack Closets and Trunks
—Send Used Clothing to Market Street Rooms

Today marks the day and this week is the week that Lowell people are expected to be able to see farther than their own neighborhoods and to make a thorough inventory of all the family clothing they have on hand in order that all the clothing that can be spared, may be turned over to the thousands of homeless, hungry and shivering men, women and children of the Hun-ravaged country of Belgium.

The North Middlesex chapter of the Red Cross says that the mark to be set for the generosity of Lowell people should be the comparatively pressing need of that destitute country. It is the North Middlesex chapter, Red Cross, with Mrs. Otis L. Humphrey as its chairman of the special committee on this work that will take charge of the garments which are to be forwarded to Belgium.

No persons can hide behind the excuse that giving to this cause is involved in too much Red Cross tape. This is not so. You merely ransack your closets and bureau drawers, perhaps wardrobe trunks, for clothing that perhaps you could use but which the Belgians need more than you do. You make a parcel of the things you will give and take it to the headquarters of the Red Cross in Market street, this city, in extreme cases if one member of the family could bring the bundle to Red Cross headquarters in Market street, the organization will put itself to the trouble and expense of sending for your bundle.

This plea of used clothing for the destitute Belgians is being made all over the nation at this time. It applies not only to Lowell and her people, so far as the province of North Middlesex chapter goes, but North Middlesex chapter wishes it made known that the people of all the towns surrounding Lowell should take this plea to heart and stand with as much generosity and thoroughness as is expected of Lowell people. Also make up bundles of used clothing and see that they reach the rooms in Market street. It is the great friend of Belgium, Herbert Hoover himself, who intercedes and asks his fellow Americans to help out the stricken nation at this time, not with new and unused clothing, but with the perhaps still wearable castoff clothing of our most fortunate of all the world's people. Hoover has said that not less than 5,000 tons of clothing of this kind is needed immediately. The plight of the Belgians is heightened by the fact that the country was overcome and overpowered by a ruthless and cruel enemy who, in the four years that he held the country, made it his business to steal every possible piece of cloth in the country and rush it back to Germany where his kaiser-worshipping masses were still idealizing the kaiser while wearing paper suits.

Many thousands of people in Lowell and vicinity wish to know what kind of garments and of what materials, are most needed by the Belgians. Garments for women and little children are badly needed. Particularly woolen garments are more than appreciated. Soft caps and hats may be sent. Men's shirts and pajamas somewhat worn and shrunken may nevertheless be used again in Belgium. Old shoes of every kind should be sent, even those which need repairs, and leather scraps too will be sent on the mercy ships hurrying toward western Europe.

New England people have been asked to furnish 100 tons of old clothes for the Belgians and it is expected Lowell will in this demand exceed her responsibility as she has done in every other requirement connected with the war and its ramifications.

CASE NON-SUITED
The case of James P. O'Donnell vs. the city of Lowell was non-suited in the civil session of the superior court with jury this morning owing to the fact that the plaintiff failed to put in an appearance. This was a petition filed by Mr. O'Donnell for the assessing of damages to his property at the corner of Merrimack street and Cardinal O'Connell parkway on the ground that the grade of the new thoroughfare as laid out by the city caused considerable damage to his property. In connection with the petition there was also an action of tort in the sum of $10,000, but that was dismissed a short time ago.

Local Board of Trade Suggests Fine Public Hall as Memorial

To Lowell's Soldiers and Sailors—Plan Discussed by Executive Committee

The Lowell board of trade proposes the plan of making this city's memorial for its soldiers and sailors in the war a magnificent public hall to serve the sentimental purpose of commemorating the gallant part taken by Lowell's sons in the great war and the utilitarian purpose of giving the city what it has long wanted, a spacious building for public gatherings.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the board yesterday the matter was discussed and the public hall memorial was agreed upon as most suitable.

The expense of the proposition is to be borne, according to plans, by bonds issued both to the municipality of the city and to individual citizens.

A committee to consider the best methods of reorganizing Americanization work here was appointed, consisting of the following members: John J. Mahoney, principal of the State Normal school, chairman; Hugh J. Molloy, superintendent of schools; R. B. Walsh, chairman of the school committee; P. A. Flaherty, Judge F. Wadleigh and Robert P. Marden.

A membership campaign will soon be started by the board and John K. Whittier, chairman of the campaign committee, is confident that a large number of new members will enter the body's ranks. The executive committee voted to recommend to the board that its annual dues be $10 a member for individuals, $20 for firms and the present charges for large corporations.

Secretary John J. O'Rourke submitted a report on his recent visit to the convention of commercial secretaries at Rochester, N. Y.

RULES FOR RESTAURANTS AND LUNCH CARTS

A set of rules and regulations governing restaurants and lunch carts, supplementary to the present rules of the board of health, were submitted to the board this morning by Dr. Thomas P. Carroll, and were approved and will be submitted to the license commission at its regular meeting tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock.

The rules have been approved by the state board of health and will have a tendency to rigidize the regulations surrounding the sanitary phase of the conduct of eating places in this city, passed by the license commission. Upon passage by that body, the rules will become part of the agreement upon which licenses for such places will hereafter be issued.

The only other business of moment to come before the board this morning was a hearing given the Honis Co., proprietors of the Puritan Lunch of Bridge street, on several complaints made to the board on the alleged unsanitary condition of the place. After hearing Mr. Honis, the proprietor, the board voted to let the matter stand for the present and to inspect the premises at a later date. Adjourned at 11.05.
